

Where in the world?

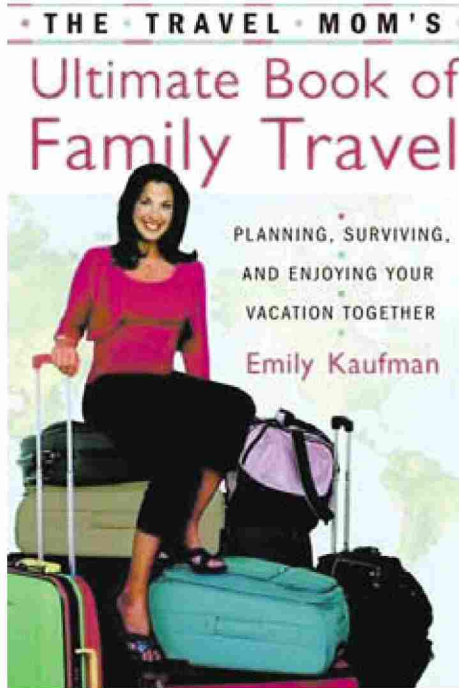

A WEEKLY GEOGRAPHY QUIZ

Q: The Levi Coffin house outside Fountain City, Ind., is known as:

- A. The home of rivets used to tack corners of blue serge cloth.
- B. Grand Central Station of the Underground Railroad.
- C. Where caskets were first lined with silk.

Answer the question correctly and you could win a copy of "The Travel Mom's Ultimate Book of Family Travel" by Emily Kaufman (2006, Broadway Books, a $14.95 retail value).

You have until 5 p.m. Tuesday to submit your answer at www.courier-journal.com/travel. The winner will be chosen in a random draw from all correct entries. The winner's name and the correct answer will appear in this space next week. No purchase is necessary to enter or to win. For complete rules, visit the Web site.

LAST WEEK'S QUESTION

Q: Beijing has an immense new airport terminal that has opened for business. What are its International Air Transport Association codes?

- A. PEK and BJS
- B. PKG and BJJ
- C. PKG and BJS
- D. PBJ and BIG

Seventy-three of 78 participants knew the answer is A. (The IATA Airport Code is PEK, reflecting Beijing's former Romanization of Peking. The code BJS is also frequently used, reflecting the current Pinyin spelling of Beijing.)

We'll send our randomly selected winner, Robert Watson of Louisville, a copy of "Asian Business Customs & Manners," by Mary Murray Bosrock (2007, Meadowbrook Press, a $16 retail value).

Printing imperfections present during scanning